

When I was a little girl, I wanted to have one of two careers when I grew up: A teacher, or a rock and roll star. My rock and roll career ended at an early age since I couldn't sing, but the passion of teaching did not. I remember playing school with my sister and writing assignments on the chalkboard at home. I would use my old schoolbooks to teach from. That memory is what guided through my education. My passion is teaching. I thrive on the creativity and challenge that surrounds education. I love greeting my students in the morning with a smile, and see their faces light up when they have just learned something new. Teaching is not just a career for me, it is a life-long choice.
